Acadia Healthcare Expands Suicide Prevention Effort Within Substance Use Community

HENDERSONVILLE, Tenn., Apr. 7, 2021 - Acadia Healthcare, a leading provider of behavioral healthcare services, and The Jason Foundation, Inc. (JFI), a nationally recognized leader in suicide awareness and prevention, today jointly announced that they have expanded their offerings by opening 15 Community Resource Centers (CRCs). Acadia Healthcare became affiliated with The Jason Foundation in 2013 to provide educational materials and programs to the patients, families, and communities they serve.

Substance use, mental illness, and suicidal ideation have long held an interconnected relationship. Dealing with substance use disorders can prove substantially more difficult when facing mental health struggles, as inhibitions are lowered when people are intoxicated. According to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, “Opiates were present in 20 percent of suicide deaths ...” and “approximately 22 percent of deaths by suicide involved alcohol intoxication ...”

These Community Resource Centers are located within Acadia’s Comprehensive Treatment Centers (CTCs), which provide medication-assisted treatment to adults age 18 and older who are struggling with opioid use disorder. By combining counseling with prescription medications, CTCs can help adults achieve successful long-term recovery from opioid addiction.

Community Resource Centers will provide patients, their families, and the surrounding communities with educational materials designed to inform them on how substance use disorders are related to mental health concerns and suicidal ideation. They will also guide those in need toward resources for help. The CRCs are located in 15 Comprehensive Treatment Centers in four states across the country.

“The opening of these Community Resource Centers will have an enormous beneficial impact on the communities they serve,” remarked Clark Flatt, president of The Jason Foundation. “The rise of opioid abuse and the toll that substance abuse takes on the mental well-being of our loved ones should not be ignored. We must look to treat all aspects of an individual’s well-being to ensure that we do not lose someone prematurely.”

“The stigma surrounding opioid use prevents many people from seeking treatment,” said Tanya Dillon-Page, senior vice president of operations program development for Acadia’s CTC Group. “This can ultimately have devastating consequences, including the onset of suicidal ideation and behaviors. We are grateful for the opportunity to partner with The Jason Foundation so that we can raise awareness of the link between suicide and opioid addiction and offer additional support to our communities.”
